

Pre-roll guidance

Who can make pre-rolls?

A licensed cannabis cultivator, wholesaler, or retailer may process and package a pre-rolled joint if it is made from flower only and not infused.

An infused pre-roll must be produced by a licensed cannabis manufacturer.

Neither cultivators, wholesalers, nor manufacturers may sell directly to the public. Public sales of cannabis flower and products may only be sold by a licensed retailer.

Who can package pre-rolls?

Standard (flower-only) pre-rolls can be packaged by cultivators, retailers and wholesalers.

An infused pre-roll is considered a cannabis product. After being produced by a manufacturer, it can be packaged either by that manufacturer or by a licensed wholesaler.

Pre-roll packaging requirements

Standard pre-rolls (flower only) must be in child-deterrent packaging (tear-resistant and difficult enough to open that it would discourage a child under five to access its contents).

Infused pre-rolls must be in child-resistant packaging (This is a federally-defined term. Must be significantly difficult for a child under five to access contents).

Testing Requirements

Testing requirements change depending on the product.

Potency: required on infused finished products. For standard pre-rolls, potency testing required on individual components (per process lot/cultivar/strain).

Pathogens: Individual components or finished product

Pesticides: Individual components or finished product

Residual Solvents: if infused with solvent based concentrate - Individual components

Heavy Metals: if infused with solvent based concentrate - Individual components

Moisture and water activity: Required on infused products. Should be reported on dry weight basis.

Terpene testing required for:

1. Concentrates intended for inhalation or vaporization.
2. Any product in which terpenes have been removed and reintroduced.
3. Any product with added terpenes.
4. Any product that indicates terpene content on the label.

What about kief-infused pre-rolls?

Kief-infused pre-rolls can be considered a standard pre-roll, but cultivators cannot obtain kief from another licensee, they must use their own.
